THE 7 TRAITS OF SUCCESSFUL ENTREPRENEURS :

The 7 Traits of

Tenacity

Tenacity is No. 1. So much of entrepreneurship is dealing with failure. It happens many times each week.

Passion

"Most entrepreneurs I know believe they will change the world. There's an excitement and belief in what they're doing that gets them through the hard times."

Vision

"Entrepreneurs often face naysayers because we see the future before the future plays out. You have to be several steps ahead of the market."

Tolerance of ambiguity

"It all boils down to being able to successfully manage fear: fear of humiliation, fear of missing payroll, running out of cash, bankruptcy, the list goes on."

Self-belief

"You have to have a lot of self-confidence. Be willing to take a risk, but be conservative."

Flexibility

"You have to have a willingness to be honest with yourself and say, 'This isn't working. You have to be able to pivot.'"

Rule breaking

Entrepreneurs used to defy conventional wisdom. A survey last year by Peter Dinkins of the University of California, Berkeley, and John Rubine of the London School of Economics found that entrepreneurs are more likely to break rules and conventions than other people are. They are also more likely to break rules and conventions than other people are.
